lead of the State road in this respect? Such concessions are gratefully received in these hard times, and all experience shows that they develop business, and promote the welfare of the railroads.

THE NORTH GEORGIA FAIR ASSOCIATION.

The gentlemen who have in charge the project of establishing a fair association, with headquarters in Atlanta, will begin to do a thorough canvass of the city.

This canvass is intended to settle definitely whether or not the people of Atlanta want this association to be established. They have not met with the success in canvassing that they had the right to expect. While certain men have been very liberal, others have done nothing at all, and others have no intention of doing anything. It is out of the question that a few should be called upon to bear the whole burden, and unless there is a general disposition to-day developed to help the matter out, the whole scheme will be abandoned.

We need not say this will be very disastrous to Atlanta. Such an association as they propose to establish, will bring thousands of visitors to the city each year, and piles of money besides building up its reputation for life energy and activity. It is exceedingly important that this enterprise shall go through. We feel sure that the endorser who show great public spirit in their work, will meet with prompt and liberal responses to their petitions. The amount of money needed is large, but a small amount from each person will soon get up the needed sum.

A REMARKABLE LETTER.

The late Christian Advocate contains a fine letter from the Rev. Lyvick Pierce, one of the oldest and most devoted champions of Methodism in the world.

The letter is written on the occasion of the old gentleman's 93d birthday, and is full of inspiration and devotion. One part of it, in which he describes a vision that appeared to him, is quite remarkable. We have often heard of such visions, but never in such a simple and unassuming manner as this. It is a life of pious heroism and single-hearted love for God, can ever be crowned with a fore-sight in life, that are promised beyond the grave, then no one can wonder that this ecstatic vision blessed the eyes of this brave old veteran. We give the part of his letter referred to the matter discussed. The doctor says:

"My own state. A trance is said to be a state in which the soul seems to have passed out of the body—a state of ecstasy. Peter fell into a trance at Joppa, and in that state he had his wonderful vision. But whether the mind is simply disconnected or supernaturally illuminated, one thing, however, is certain—the state itself is a reality. When I passed out of my own common self, I had the ecstasy I was full of divine communion. The room seemed to be filled with the glory of God. My bliss was that of a seeming bathing in spiritual life and change to say, I made no pretensions, though I remained on my knees with variations for three days. Nor has it passed entirely away. So my ninety-third year ends. 'O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, his mercy endureth forever.'"

THE APRIL MAGAZINES.

Scribner's for April is rich, both in illustration and letter-press. The initial pages are devoted to "The Hunt on the Au Sable," by W. Mackay Laflin, with illustrations by the author, and these illustrations are by far the best part of the article. They are, in fact, exquisite and to speak truth of the work of one who allows his middle name to protrude with what some one has happily called idiotic obviousness, is to make a humiliating concession. In the article entitled "King David," Constant Fenimore Wood describes the failure of an enthusiastic northern man, who, big with a "mission," came south to teach the blacks. The knowledge of negro character displayed by Miss Woodson is so exceedingly technical in this particular direction that we are inclined to the belief that the King was a Queen, and that his name in reality was Constance. At any rate, the fair author is candid enough to go completely "behind the returns" on the subject of negro education. The next article of note is a very unsatisfactory California sketch, by Bret Harte, entitled "Two Saints of the Foot-Hills." We say unsatisfactory, because, while there is here and there a strong flash of the style that gave fame, if not fortune, to the California Dickens, the sketch falls far below the least characteristics of those included in the volume called "The Luck of Roaring Camp, and Other Sketches." We have not the space to make a catalogue of all the articles in the magazine, but we may mention, among the others, "The Mosaic Creation and Modern Science," "Macrame Lace, by Clarence Cook," an interesting description, appropriately and admirably illustrated, of "The Telephone," and the "Photograph," "A Queen's School," and the "United States," which are unusually bright and interesting.

Lippincott's for April keeps well up in therace for popular favor. It is perhaps not so profusely illustrated as some of its competitors, and not altogether so brilliant in its make-up, but it is one of the best of American magazines. There is something Philadelphia in the solidity of its literature, and solidity is not to be confounded with the dullness that has for generations made Philadelphia its abiding place. The magazine opens with a picturesque paper on "The Italian Lakes," Paul Hayne contributes a neat bit of verse entitled "In Ambush," and Sidney Lanier has a grotesque sonnet on "The Harlequin of Dreams." Among the other articles are: "The Home of the Jaguar," "The Collections of Edward L. Davenport," "Home Harmonies," "Alexander Dumas the Younger," and the usual editorial departments.

The International Review, is without doubt the best of our more pretensions periodicals. The March-April number opens with General Saylor's reply to General Richard Taylor, of which we have already made note. This is followed by a paper from the pen of David A. Wells on "The Elements of National Wealth," "The Mexico of the Mexican," "Some Noted Women of Bologna," "The Method of Electing the President," embodying articles from Judge Cook, of Michigan, and Congressman Hewitt, of "Modern Love," by Dr. Samuel Osgood; "Imperial Federalism in Germany," by Baron von Holstendorff, of Munich, and other papers of a thoughtful and timely character. The April number of which is illustrated by a steel engraving of Professor O. O. Marsh, of Yale college, it is perhaps needless to say more than that it embodies selections from the best current literature, presenting monthly nearly everything from the British magazines that is worthy of attention or preservation. In this respect the Eclectic is without a rival.

GEORGIA IN CONGRESS.

Senator Ockrell from the committee on claims reported, on the 13th instant, the bill for the relief of the Masonic hall company of Atlanta. It was reported without amendment, and the accompanying report was ordered to be printed. Senator Jordan introduced a bill to promote the deposit of savings and the refunding of the national debt.

The motion was agreed to. We have already given a synopsis of this important bill.

On the following day the speaker laid before the house a letter from the secretary of war, transmitting a report of Assistant-Engineer Frobel, concerning the proposed improvement of the Coconino river. On Mr. Sawyer's bill to prescribe the time for the payment of the tax on distilled spirits, Messrs. Bell, Blount, Candler, Felton, Harris, Hartridge and Smith voted "aye," Messrs. Cook and Stephens were absent. All imported liquors that come to this country can be kept in bond three years. This bill gives the same time to the distillers of this country. Under the present law the manufacturers of fine whiskies have been required to pay the tax in one year, while the goods are not marketable until they are three or four years old. The government is paid by the distiller for the extra time granted in at the rate of 5 per cent per annum on the amount of the tax assessed on the whiskey when it is bonded. Mr. Smith presented the petition of citizens of Mitchell county for an appropriation for the improvement of Flint river.

At Mr. Candler's request the contested election case of Dean vs. Field was taken up on Friday, the fifteenth instant, and Mr. Candler made a long speech on the subject, which was afterwards frequently referred to. It is considered an exhaustive presentation of the minority view of the case.

On Saturday, the sixteenth of last month, the committee of claims favorably reported the bill for the relief of William Hedgepeth, of Paulding county. Messrs. Bell, Cook, Felton, Harris, Hartridge and Smith voted in favor of the southern-mail contract bill. Messrs. Blount, Candler and Stephens did not vote. The bill for the relief of James J. Waring, of Savannah, was taken up. It directs the secretary of the treasury to refund to Mr. Waring the sum of $800, in gold and one cent, out of any money in the treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, on account of that amount having been paid by him on a portion of the steam-pump machinery imported by him, which was ordered when the same was duty free, but a portion of which did not arrive in the United States until after duty was established on such goods. The bill was passed. Mr. Stephens presented a memorial of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, asking for the establishment of a branch mint at Atlanta.

When the states were called on the eighteenth of last month, Mr. Stephens introduced a bill for the relief of Capt. Egbert Thompson, United States Navy; Mr. Smith, a bill to repeal all taxes and duties on legacies, and Mr. Felton, a bill to remove the political disabilities of Oscar F. Johnston, of Catastoga county. Leave of absence was granted to Mr. Candler for fifteen days. Mr. Stephens obtained unanimous consent to introduce a bill for the improvement of the Savannah river above Augusta.

Mr. Hartridge presented a petition of citizens of Savannah in favor of aid to the Texas and Pacific road, Mr. Stephens, the petition of Alexander F. Stephens, in his own behalf, and in behalf of many citizens of Richmond, Columbia, Lincoln, Walker, Elbert and Hart counties, for an appropriation of $20,000 to improve the Savannah river above the city of Augusta.

When the bill to fix the compensation of the United States marshals and deputies came up, Mr. Hartridge had it amended so as to authorize a chief deputy for each district. This amendment applies to Georgia, Marshall's district, and the two departments, which are unusually bright and interesting.

facts and will be grateful for a close and critical examination of the goods and prices in his stock store he has ever offered. Having just returned from New York, where he was in daily attendance to business, and often being tempted into buying goods entirely out of the line, but which were likewise, he was anxious to offer goods at prices entirely without competition.

Bold Saying, But It is a True One.

on by the business firms of other days, long since grown obsolete, he has the boldness to take hold of them at the LOWEST PRICES, and then, having cleared off hundreds of cash, with him, he has sold
